BENEFITS OF CEHA MEMBERSHIP

LEGISLATIVE & REGULATORY REPRESENTATION

- CEHA works in conjunction with the California Conference of Directors of Environmental Health and other allied industry associations to identify and actively advocate on key legislative issues that impact the environmental health profession.
- CEHA informs its members of new and emerging regulatory issues that may affect the way the environmental health profession operates. This may be in the form of written articles, workshops and seminars or local chapter meetings.

PROFESSIONAL & EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

- CEHA conducts the Annual Educational Symposium (AES) each spring — a three day conference that offers a number of sessions following select tracks that represent the formal disciplines of the environmental health profession including food safety, liquid and solid waste, housing and plan check, hazardous materials, vector control, diseases, noise, recreational facilities and management issues.
- CEHA coordinates the traveling seminar series each year that brings informative workshops and seminars to your region. Topics will vary according to the needs and demand of the environmental health profession.
- CEHA provides career opportunities for environmental health professionals by posting job announcements on the CEHA web site.

- CEHA members meet locally at chapter gatherings and regional conferences to take advantage of networking opportunities among colleagues in the area.

COMMUNICATION VEHICLES

- CEHA publishes the California Environmental Health Bulletin each quarter that serves as the official communication product for CEHA members. This informative publication will update you on activities of CEHA at both the state and local level, brief you on the latest legislative and regulatory issues, include standing columns from the Department of Health Services and environmental health leadership, and provide timely articles that will enhance your knowledge of the environmental health field.
- CEHA maintains a membership web site located at www.ceha.org, updated on a regular basis to provide you with the latest information on all CEHA activities. CEHA is committed to keeping up-to-date with the technical advancements in online services and continuously seeks ways to make this site user friendly and informative.
- CEHA offers members an Internet forum for discussion of environmental health topics through its list server program that can be activated by going to ceha-subscribe@yahogroups.com.
